"For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind. Therefore do not be ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me His prisoner, but share with me in the sufferings for the gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began."
2nd Timothy 1:7-9

Dear People of St. David's,

I have been reflecting on transitions as well as speaking to others about their experiences. Something that I've heard and that I know to be true is that the in-between time, once we've left what is familiar and before the new thing becomes normalized, feels the most scary. We can feel as though we must grasp onto everything that we know and try to control all that we are able in order to try to bring some kind of comfort, stability, and security.

I have been reading 2nd Timothy and have found a very helpful reminder in this scripture. That God does not give us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind...share with me in the sufferings for the Gospel according to the power of God, who has saved us and called us with a holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace which was given to us in Christ Jesus before time began.

God regularly calls us to try new things and to become new people. While that does feel quite frightening to leave behind the things of old, we should all rejoice that it is God who calls us, and God does have a purpose. We might not always understand it, but we are not always called to understand, but we are called to follow where God is leading us.

My prayer for us all is that we may find the power and love to move to where God is leading us.
